CAUGHT IN THE MARQUIS' TRAP.

The Apostle of Purity Denied the Privilege of Bail.

DAMAGING EVIDENCE GIVEN

USUAL CROWDS THROUGH THE COURT ROOM.

The Hero of Impulsive American and English Females Convicted of the Greatest Kind of Immorality Known to Civilized People—Taylor, Who Acted as Prosecutor, is Also Arrested—A Shocking Case.

London, April 6.—Crowds besieged the vicinity of Bow street early this morning and the police court was filled with interested spectators as soon as the doors were opened. Among those who succeeded in pressing through the crowd was one good looking middle aged woman. All were anxious to see Oscar Wilde, whose arrest yesterday followed close upon the sensational termination of his suit for libel against the marquis of Queensberry, is discussed on all sides.

C. F. Gill, who was Edward M. Carson's junior counsel, in the defense of the marquis of Queensberry, acted as prosecutor today for the treasury department.

Sir John Bridge, the presiding magistrate, took his seat on the bench at 11 o'clock.

The door leading to the cells was then opened and Wilde was seen approaching, carrying a silk hat in his hand. When he reached the center of the prisoners' dock, he deposited his hat on the seat opposite to Sir John Bridge, folded his arms and leaned on the rail in the same indolent manner he displayed on the witness stand in the Old Bailey.

Inciting Boys to Crime.
Gill said he appeared to prosecute the prisoner on a series of charges of inciting boys to terrible crimes and actually committing acts of gross indecency. The prosecutor then related how, in 1893, when Wilde was staying at Savoy hotel, Alfred Taylor (who was arrested today) acted as procurer for Wilde, who repeatedly visited Taylor's house. Continuing, Gill said the prosecution proposed to show how Taylor approached a young man named Parker, a valet out of position, and his brother, a groom. Taylor, it was stated, had told how money could be made by going with gentlemen and said Wilde was a man who gave much money to youths and men. They finally consented and it was arranged that they should be introduced to Wilde at a dinner he would give at a private room at Kitchener's restaurant. After this dinner Wilde announced to Taylor, who was also present, that Charles Parker was the boy for him and he took the latter to the Savoy hotel, where he committed the crime.

Taylor in the Tolls.
Parker was called to the stand, but the proceedings were interrupted by an official announcing that Taylor had been arrested. A few moments later Taylor was brought into court and placed in the dock beside Wilde, who nodded to him. Parker gives the most minute details of his intimacy with Wilde. He testified that he visited Wilde at the Savoy hotel, at Albemarle, at Wilde's chambers, and at other addresses almost daily. While Parker was giving this testimony Wilde moved restlessly in the dock and passed his hands across his face. Parker added that he was arrested with Taylor in the raid in 1894 in a house in Fitzroy square, but claimed that he had since abandoned his evil life.

Counsel for Wilde asked leave to postpone the cross-examination of Parker, as the evidence had taken them by surprise. Parker was then bound over to testify at the trial of Wilde, which is to take place in the Old Bailey.

The woman previously referred to as having entered the court room early this morning was the next witness. She gave her name as Mrs. Grant, and said she let rooms to Taylor, who she added, was visited by young men and highly perfumed. She replied they were from 15 and upwards. Mrs. Grant was then asked if she could identify Wilde as a visitor to Taylor's rooms. She replied she could not. Thereupon Sir John Bridges said quietly: "Wilde, stand up."

Wilde arose, but without was still unable to recognize him, but replying to counsel's questions, said she remembered Taylor addressed one visitor as "Oscar."

Most Positive Testimony.
Mrs. Grant said Taylor's rooms were furnished with well and highly perfumed. Taylor, she added, dressed effeminately. Witness also said boys staid all night with him. Before Taylor left Mrs. Grant's room a sergeant of police came to her apartments and secretly watched Taylor's proceedings. Sir John Bridges asked Taylor if he desired to ask witness any question. The prisoner replied: "Not yet."

Alfred Woods, a nice-looking young man, was then called to the stand. He testified that Taylor introduced him to Wilde in 1893 and he committed indecent acts with him. He said Wilde's family was away. Witness added that he was intoxicated at the time, as Wilde previously had given him champagne, whiskey and hook. Continuing, Woods said Wilde afterwards gave him a good deal of money and a watch and chain. Witness also added that soon after he told Taylor he wanted to "get away from Wilde and people like him."

A masser at Savoy testified that he saw Wilde at the time, as Wilde previously had given him champagne, whiskey and hook. Continuing, Woods said Wilde afterwards gave him a good deal of money and a watch and chain. Witness also added that soon after he told Taylor he wanted to "get away from Wilde and people like him."

Witness added that Taylor told Wilde that he (witness) wanted to go to America, whereupon Wilde asked to see certain letters referred to him. When he received these letters, Wilde gave witness 17s. Witness (Woods) then went to America.

Sidney Hoover, a good-looking youth, followed Woods to the witness stand. He testified that he met Wilde and Lord Alfred Douglas at Taylor's rooms. Hoover admitted staying with Taylor, but not with Wilde.

Wilde Wilde listens.
Wilde Wilde, Oscar Wilde's brother, entered the court-room at this stage of the proceedings and listened to the remainder of the evidence from the back of the room.

After the chambermaid of the Savoy hotel had given some other statements to the masser, Sir John Bridges remanded Wilde until next Thursday. Counsel asked that Wilde be released on bail, but the justice refused to do so. Counsel persisted, saying he could offer substantial bail, but Sir John Bridges replied: "It is not a case for bail at all."

They Believe The Charges.
Rev. Archibald Douglas, brother of Marquis of Queensberry, has written a letter, saying that the statement credited to Lord Douglas of Hawick, eldest son of the marquis, published in an interview in the Leader today, says that another sensational arrest of the family of the Marquis of Queensberry, except the latter, disbelieve absolutely and entirely all the charges made against Oscar Wilde, is unauthorized by his mother, his sister or himself. The Rev. Archibald Douglas adds: "We certainly believe the charges made against Wilde."

Taylor was arrested today and preserved his cheerful demeanor and asked the detective who took him in to custody what the sentence was likely to be. The Sun of this city says that another sensational arrest is possible before Thursday next, the day when Oscar Wilde will be brought to Bow Street police court on remand.

The Marquis of Queensberry has authorized the Globe to deny that there is any truth in the story cabled to the United Press that he had written Oscar Wilde a letter, saying: "If the country allows you to leave, all the better for the country, but, if you take my son with you, I shall follow you wherever you go and shoot you."

THE SUFFRAGE ISSUE.

HONOR TO THE DELEGATES WHO KEPT THEIR PLEDGE.

An Interesting Letter From Georgia Snow Carleton, of Ogden—Her View of the Question.

"God reigns and rules."

"Blessed is that nation whose God is the Lord; the Lord of truth and righteousness."

All honor to the brave men who stood resolute to their pledge to represent, not themselves, but their individual convictions to which they have an undoubted right and may express at the polls when they retire to private life, but to represent the convictions and do the bidding of the people. What is the matter with the public conscience that it is so easily swayed by artful demagogues who, in several towns, are trying to raise questions of expediency, party considerations and all the specious sophistry advanced against equal suffrage?

Personally I believe the people do speak when they elected their delegates on their respective party platforms, and that whether equal suffrage was included in the body of the constitution or placed as a separate article the result would be the same. The people could and would speak again. The fact remains that both parties were pledged to the people; they had no choice; their duty was as plain as the noontide sun.

If statehood and the constitution is defied by the insertion of a clause to which they were pledged, does it not show that the people are too unstable to be entrusted with the grave responsibility of self-government; that instead of the noblest of men, sinners of life they were only weeds which die in the fall. "The wages of sin is death," a solemn truth which applies with even force to sinners of political, than to individuals. Parties sow the wind, the nation reaps the whirlwind. From every heart shine and are true to the people. What is the voice of the people but the voice of conscience? Are we a lying people? Do we still believe that we can "gather grapes from thorn" or "figs from thistles?"

Shall we lay the foundation of our new state with the corner stone of party platforms are made for politicians to get in on and then kick the people from under their feet? It is time that politics were purified. It is time that women, who are greater "purifiers of heart" which enables man to "see God," is not her influence needed in this crisis?

It is significant that "equal suffrage" finds its strongest advocates among happily married men. They plead woman's cause not from the plane of ideal sentiment but ask that the sun shine and are true to the people. They plead their individual lives may shine and bless other lives and homes which are destitute of her influence. GEORGIA SNOW CARLETON.

"She wrote in a handwriting clerk. She talked with an emphasis joy. She painted on tiles in the sweetest of styles." But she didn't know chicken from turkey.

But she knew Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery to be the very best remedy for a sallow and unhealthy complexion. It brightens the skin by acting on the liver and removing all the bilious and scrofulous poison from the blood. Sure cure also for consumption in its early stages.
